

From Marzano's CHECKLIST OF DAILY REFLECTIONS

Will students be reminded...

...of specific rules & procedures or will new ones be established?

...about specific academic learning goals or will new goals be set?

Will students be provided with feedback progress on an academic learning goal?

Will students be asked to record/ reflect on their progress on learning goals?

Will students be provided with some form of recognition for their progress on learning goals?

Am I being sensitive to the need for a variety of mediums for critical-input experiences?

Will I augment the critical-input experience by using anecdotes & narratives?

What specific techniques will I use to ensure that students actively process new information

What will my role be in those techniques?

What practice activities will I use & what is my role during these activities?

What knowledge-deepening activities will I use & what is my role during these activities?

What will the role of homework be in these activities?

What will I do to facilitate the hypothesis generation & testing tasks that have been assigned?

What will my role be during these activities?

What will the role of homework be during these activities?

How will grouping be used during ALL these activities?

What techniques for engaging students should I be ready to use today?

What positive consequences should I be ready to implement today?

What negative consequences should I be ready to implement today?

What actions should I be ready to take to communicate a sense of guidance & control?

What actions should I be ready to take to communicate a sense of cooperation & concern?

Are my student relationship actions balanced?

Which students should I be paying particular attention to in terms of eliciting their participation?

What techniques should I be ready to use to establish appropriate affective tone for low-expectancy students?

What techniques should I be ready to use to enhance quality of interactions with low-expectancy students?

Am I being sensitive to the need for variety in all these activities, actions & techniques?